

Dark emperor shadow energy storage effect

Overview

What is a shadow-effect energy generator?

Tan and his team created the device, called a shadow-effect energy generator, by placing a superthin coating of gold on silicon, a typical solar cell material. Like in a solar cell, light shining on silicon energizes its electrons.

How does a shadow effect energy generator work?

With the gold layer, the shadow-effect energy generator produces an electric current when part of the device lies in shadow. The excited electrons jump from the silicon to the gold. With part of the device shaded, the voltage of the illuminated metal increases relative to the dark area and electrons in the generator flow from high to low voltage.

Could Shadows and light combine to power small electronics?

Someday, shadows and light could team up to provide power. A new device exploits the contrast between bright spots and shade to create a current that can power small electronics. "We can harvest energy anywhere on Earth, not just open spaces," says Swee Ching Tan, a materials scientist at the National University of Singapore.
