Chile is moving quickly to advance its clean energy transition, according to Wood Mackenzie's "Chile Power Markets Long-Term Outlook H1 2025" report. While the rapid growth of renewable energy has been remarkable, it has also created challenges such as power curtailment and fluctuating electricity.

According to modelling by the International Energy Agency, Chile is on track to eliminate coal-fired power by 2030 and get to over 90% renewables on an annual basis by then. The latest: In January 2025, coal made up less than 11% of Chile's electrical output, a new monthly low, according to data.

Since then, Chile has dramatically increased its solar and wind capacity year over year. It has done so without any major government subsidies. In 2022, renewables provided on average over 30% of the electricity needed for the national grid. Chile's National Energy Policy is even more ambitious. Will solar power become the first source of electricity in Chile?

Additionally, according to a study by the Chilean Association of Power Generators, by 2030, solar power is expected to reach 30% of total installed capacity, becoming the country's first source of electrical energy. The increasing solar capacity and development of new projects are expected to drive the solar energy market in the forecast period.

Will Enel Chile start a solar power plant in 2022?

September 2022: Enel Chile got authorization from the National Electric Coordinator to commence commercial operation of its Sol de Lila solar power facility, which has an installed capacity of 161 MW, through its renewable energy development company, Enel Green Power Chile.

What is the future of solar energy?

During the coming years, solar PV technology is expected to account for the largest share in new renewable capacity addition. In 2021, the total renewable energy capacity of Chile accounted for 14890 MW, with an annual growth rate of 18%. The solar industry has cut costs dramatically in the past few years through economies of scale.
