The tank I have now has some sort of coating on it. You'll be fine, go for it. Go with any color you want. I would just do black because it's plain enough and doesn't stick out too much but if you're wanting to keep some sort of stock look then paint it gray or somethin. That paint is not going to.

Just took off 76 duel tanks and was able to syphon them clean and not bad on inside. Outside just gunk and light surface rust. Looking for advice on primer and paint. Thanks I epoxy primed the whole thing then used Rhinoliner on the bottom halves because I got rid of those plastic liners that.

In this comprehensive guide, we will take you through the step-by-step process of painting a car gas tank, covering everything from preparation to finishing touches. The first step in painting a car gas tank is to understand the basics. This includes knowing the type of paint to use, the surface.

I need to get my new gas tank installed in my '64. Do I need to paint the outside of it?

If so, what is the best thing to paint it with?

Regular primer and auto paint?

I have a couple cans of cold galvanizing "paint", would that be OK to use?

I don't care about keeping it historically correct, but.
